Combating COVID19: Patent Pooling in Pharmaceutical Sector

Recently WHO and Costa Rica joined hands on the UN's patent pooling policy for pharmaceutical sector, to combat COVID19 pandemic.

WHO Director General said that, "we need to unleash the full power of science, without caveats and restrictions, to deliver innovations that are scalable, usable and benefit everyone, everywhere, at the same time. He further added that traditional market models will not be able to deliver medicines at a scale needed to cover the entire globe. Solidarity between and within countries and private sectors is essential to overcome these difficult times."

The question thus arises, what does this patent pooling platform does? and how this platform will be of good in pandemic times? To answer the first question, patent pooling provides a platform to patent right holders to voluntarily pool (bring) research data, knowledge and intellectual property related to healthcare products, which can then be licensed to the right holders or third parties, generally for a royalty and standards which apply to all equally. Costa Rica's proposal is very ambitious, as it covers all the essentials for COVID19, that is research data, know-how, blueprints of cells and designs, etc either for free access or license at a fair and affordable price.

A company irrespective of its size will not be able to do the supply of medicines to the extents of its demand during Pandemic time, hence patent pooling stands true to the test of supply as per demand.

This proposal is also been approved by United, founder and funding organization of MPP (Medicine Patent Pool), as it is in furtherance of the United's announcement on supply as per demand. This proposal is promising as patent pooling will enable generic drug manufacturers, access the data and produce drugs for mass supply to vulnerable population across the globe. It stands as largest to India, as the biggest producer of generic drugs across the globe.

Another major question stands in line of patent pooling policy is whether it is justified under the existing national and international intellectual property protection policy framework? The answer to this lies in the largest agreement which accords protection to intellectual property by laying minimum standards. TRIPS (WTO agreement on Trade Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Agreement), Article 7 and 8 of the said agreement provides exception to Intellectual Property protection. The former provides technology transfer for mutual advantage of technology manufacturers and public interest, which is conducive to social welfare and balance of rights. Later recognises right of member states to adopt measures for public health and public interest. Doha Declaration (part of TRIPS) on public health, as it requires taking steps to protect public health and provide access to medicine.
